POTS	Title: Be Civil Description: Please be civil; no personal attacks. Remember incivility is not just about cursing out others, it can also refer to personal attacks, bigotry, trolling, or otherwise rude behavior.	Title: Maintain Respectful, Harassment-Free Discussion Description: All members should communicate in a supportive and courteous manner. Do: - Share your experiences, frustrations, and advice using respectful language. - Discuss medical professionals, policies, or other subreddits without resorting to name-calling, slurs, or threats. - Report content that targets a person or group with hate, harassment, or encourages coordinated action against another community. Do Not: - Use personal attacks, insults, or demeaning language toward any individual (including doctors, other members, or people mentioned in posts). - Post hateful or bigoted remarks based on race, gender, disability, sexual orientation, or any protected characteristic. - Engage in or encourage brigading—calling on members to harass, target, or interfere with another subreddit or its users. - Troll, spread misinformation deliberately, or provoke others without constructive purpose. Violations may result in removal of the content and, for repeated offenses, a temporary or permanent ban. Constructive criticism and venting are welcome as long as they remain free of personal attacks and hateful language.	Title: Foster Constructive Conversations Description: Encourage respectful and constructive interactions by focusing on specific behaviors and actions that promote a positive and supportive community environment.
Scratch_OS	Title: Have common sense Description: Follow Reddit's Terms of Service. It's not that much to ask for. Don't use excessive vulgar language, don't make stuff NSFW; remember: this sub isn't ONLY for adults so please act mature.	Title: Keep content respectful and appropriate for all ages Description: All submissions must: 1. Follow Reddit's Terms of Service. 2. Use civil language – avoid profanity, excessive vulgarity, or slurs. 3. Be safe for all ages – no sexual, graphic, or otherwise NSFW material. 4. Avoid spam or meaningless filler (e.g., repetitive characters, irrelevant gibberish). 5. Credit any borrowed projects or code and do not hide the original creator's identity. Posts that violate any of these points will be removed. When in doubt, ask yourself whether a newcomer of any age would feel comfortable reading your post.	Title: Be Respectful and Safe Online Description: Follow Reddit's Terms of Service and maintain a respectful environment. Avoid using excessive vulgar language, posting NSFW content, or engaging in any behavior that could be considered immature or disruptive. Ensure your posts and interactions contribute positively to the community.
scambait	Title: No Off Topic Posts. Posts Only Relating To Scambaiting Permitted. Description: Please only post topics relating to scambaiting techniques, stories, dialogues, and workflows.	Title: Posts Must Directly Relate to Scambaiting Activities Description: All submissions must contain content that directly involves scambaiting. Acceptable posts include: 1. Personal scambaiting stories – describing how you engaged a scammer, the dialogue, outcome, or lessons learned. 2. Techniques, tools, or workflows – detailed explanations of methods, scripts, software, voice-changing, phone-spoofing, etc., used to bait scammers. 3. Scambaiting tutorials or guides – step-by-step instructions that help others replicate a baiting scenario. 4. Analysis of scambaiting tactics – discussion of patterns, regional trends, or how scammers respond to bait. Do NOT post: - Personal venting or feelings about scams without a baiting component (e.g., "I feel unwanted", "Task scammers are just shameless"). - General scam news, alerts, or advice that does not involve a baiting interaction (e.g., mail-routing scams, generic "scam call" reports). - Promotional content for apps, services, or unrelated websites. - Posts that merely reference scams without showing how you baited or engaged the scammer. If you are unsure whether your post fits, ask in the comments before submitting. Posts that fail to meet these criteria will be removed for being off-topic.	Title: Relevant Scambaiting Content Only Description: All posts must be directly related to scambaiting techniques, stories, dialogues, or workflows. This includes sharing experiences, asking for advice, or providing information that contributes to the community's goal of scambaiting. Posts that do not relate to these topics will be removed.
Smite	Title: Low Effort Posts and common issues Description: Posts on the Subreddit must adhere to a certain standard of quality and should encourage discussion. Examples for low effort posts include, but are not limited to: * Reposts * Shitposts * AI generated art * LFG/clan/scrims posts * Posts with vague titles * AMAs * Screen caps showing end game stat screens, high god mastery levels, or "funny" numbers * Pictures/videos taken with a phone * Rants about deserter penalties * PS4/5 cross-progression * Complaints about skin choices for crossovers	Title: Maintain Post Quality &amp; Relevance Description: Posts must contribute original, discussion-worthy content to r/Smite. Before submitting, ensure your post meets all of the following: 1. Clear, descriptive title – avoid vague phrasing like "Janus" or "Smite 2 dead?"; include the main topic or question. 2. Original contribution – add analysis, personal experience, a well-framed question, or substantive commentary. Pure opinion statements without context (e.g., "Smite 2 is fire") are acceptable only when they are part of a broader discussion. 3. No reposts or duplicate content – if the same image, video, or text has been posted recently, refrain from reposting. 4. Recruitment &amp; LFG posts belong elsewhere – any request to find players, clans, or scrims must be posted in /r/SmiteLM or the official Discord. 5. AMA posts are not allowed – the subreddit is for community discussion, not personal Q&amp;A sessions. 6. Avoid low-effort media – AI-generated art, phone-captured screenshots, or bare stat screens without explanation are prohibited. 7. No single-sentence rants or complaints about penalties, cross-progression, skin choices, etc., unless accompanied by detailed reasoning and a request for discussion. 8. Provide context for images/video – if you share a screenshot or clip, explain why it is relevant (e.g., strategy, bug report, highlight). If your post satisfies these criteria, it will likely be well-received. When in doubt, add a brief paragraph explaining the purpose of your submission before posting. Allowed examples include thoughtful analysis of game updates, detailed questions about mechanics, community-driven suggestions, and well-structured news or developer-update summaries, as demonstrated by the highly-upvoted posts in the community.	Title: Improve game development and management based on community feedback Description: Refine game development and management processes based on community feedback to enhance the overall gaming experience.
thyroidcancer	Title: Be kind! Description: The person you're talking to might be in a vulnerable spot.	Title: Communicate with Empathy and Respect Description: When posting, assume readers may be dealing with fear, pain, or uncertainty. Write in a supportive tone: - Avoid profanity, personal attacks, sarcasm, or dismissive remarks aimed at other members, doctors, or the community. - Refrain from blaming, shaming, or mocking anyone's experience or choices. - Use language that acknowledges others' feelings (e.g., "I understand how hard this can be," "I'm sorry you're going through this"). - If sharing frustration, keep it constructive and focus on your own experience rather than criticizing others. - Encourage hope, resources, or helpful advice without belittling differing perspectives. Posts that contain hostile rants, insults, or demeaning language will be removed for violating this rule.	Title: Be Kind and Supportive Description: Treat others with kindness, empathy, and understanding. Be supportive of those going through challenging times, and offer help when needed. Foster a positive and inclusive community environment.

OpenChristian	Title: Don't be a troll or a jerk. Description: Don't concern troll, play devil's advocate, or pretend to be confused when you really just want to start a debate. This Rule will be interpreted at the moderators' discretion.	Title: Good-Faith Discussion Only Description: All contributions must be made in good faith. - Ask sincerely: If you pose a question, you should genuinely seek answers. Disclose any personal stance you hold rather than pretending ignorance just to spark debate. - No concern-trolling: Do not post comments whose primary purpose is to challenge, derail, or provoke the community without offering constructive insight. - Avoid false devil's advocate: Do not adopt an opposing viewpoint you do not actually hold simply to argue for the sake of argument. - No feigned confusion: Do not claim you are "confused" or "unclear" when you already understand the issue and are seeking to provoke disagreement. - Be respectful and constructive: Frame critiques or disagreements with evidence, personal experience, or genuine curiosity, and avoid rhetorical attacks aimed at stirring conflict. Posts that violate any of these guidelines may be removed at the moderators' discretion.	Title: Be Respectful and Constructive Description: Contribute to discussions in a respectful and constructive manner. Avoid intentionally provoking or disrupting conversations with the aim of causing conflict or undermining others' opinions. Focus on sharing insights, asking questions, and providing helpful feedback that promotes a positive and productive dialogue. cocaine	Title: Personal use only Description: * Pictures which show amounts around or above 3.5g are not allowed * Discussion of selling is not allowed, even if it takes place outside reddit * If you say you sell cocaine, you will be banned. All vendors that find customers through reddit are scammers. Many scammers discuss selling as an un-subtle way to broadcast that they are "selling" and then move to telegram or other off-reddit messaging. Any vendor you meet through reddit is a scammer.	Title: Personal-Use Discussions Only – No Selling, Sourcing, or Large-Quantity Content Description: • Allowed content: personal experiences, health discussions, jokes, advice on managing use, and photos that clearly show less than 3.5 g of cocaine (no bulk packaging or visible large amounts). • Disallowed content: 1. Any mention of "selling, buying, or sourcing" cocaine – including price requests, wholesale numbers, vendor recommendations, or how to obtain it. 2. Posts that reveal specific locations (city, neighborhood, or any detail that narrows a user to within a 4-hour drive) for buying, selling, or meeting. 3. Images or descriptions that depict 3.5 g or more of cocaine, bulk bags, bricks, or packaging that suggests distribution. 4. Claims of being a vendor or offering to sell, even if framed as "just asking" – such users will be banned. 5. Links, usernames, or contact information that facilitate private transactions (Telegram, Discord, etc.). • Enforcement: Posts violating any of the disallowed points will be removed and the user may be banned at moderator discretion. This rule aims to keep the community a safe space for personal-use discussion without enabling illegal trade. Examples of removal: "Best baggies to nickel and dime with?", "How much does a brick cost?", "I need wholesale numbers from your state." Examples of compliance: personal anecdotes about quitting, jokes about cocaine, warnings like "Don't hotplate your coke."	Title: Enhanced Cocaine Discussion Forum Rules Description: To foster a safe and informative environment for discussing cocaine-related topics.
Deltarune	Title: Low Value Content Description: This refers to content that is typically created quickly and does not contribute to a discussion. This content often copies current trends and restates information. 1. Do not submit low quality/value content in posts. 2. No copy-pastas, rage comics, advice-animal-style macros or screenshots w/o elaboration. 3. No "Doing X every day until Y" posts. Those can be done on your own personal profile. 4. No posts that are only AI-generated content. 5. Try to make posts that really spark discussion!	Title: Post Meaningful, Original Content Description: Posts must contribute original insight, discussion, or information about Deltarune. Acceptable posts include detailed analysis, news summaries, theories, art, petitions, or well-explained questions. To be approved, a post should: 1. Include substantive text (minimum two sentences) that explains the purpose or provides context. 2. Avoid pure speculation, price guesses, or "X tomorrow?" style posts with no elaboration. 3. Not be a copy-pasta meme, rage comic, or advice-animal macro. 4. Not consist solely of AI-generated text without personal input or analysis. 5. Refrain from daily-tracking series (e.g., "Doing X every day until Y"). If a post is primarily for humor or meme purposes, consider sharing it on your personal profile or in a designated meme flair, not as a main discussion thread.	Title: High-Quality Posts Only Description: Posts should contribute positively to discussions about Deltarune. Avoid content that is irrelevant, unengaging, or of low quality. This includes, but is not limited to, posts that are solely promotional, repetitive, or speculative without adding value to the conversation.
UTAustin	Title: Please do a search or use our sidebar before posting Description: In an effort to keep reposts to a minimum, we ask that you please do a search for your intended post title before posting. If your post is removed because of Rule 9 it means someone has posted the same thing recently or the answer you are looking for is linked in our sidebar.	Title: Search Existing Resources Before Posting Housing or Recommendation Questions Description: Before creating a new post that asks for housing advice, dorm recommendations, or any other information that may already be covered: 1. Use the subreddit search bar – enter keywords from your question and review the top results. 2. Check the sidebar – follow the pinned links to the FAQ, Housing Megathread, and any other relevant guides. 3. Read the latest Housing Megathread – most dorm-selection and cost-comparison questions are answered there. 4. If a similar post exists within the past 30 days, do not submit a new thread. Instead, up-vote the existing post or add a comment with your additional details. 5. If you cannot find an answer after completing steps 1-3, you may proceed to post. Mention in your post that you performed a search and list the resources you consulted. Following these steps helps keep the subreddit organized and ensures you get answers quickly from existing discussions.	Title: Search Before Posting: Keep Our Community Organized Description: Before posting a question, please search our subreddit and use available resources. This helps keep our community organized and reduces redundant posts. If your question is answered in our FAQ or sidebar, it may be removed.
feedthebeast	Title: No posts about cheats/exploits, or cheat-like content Description: Posts promoting or similarly discussing cheats/exploits or cheat-like content will be removed	Title: No requests or promotion of cheat/hack or cheat-like mods Description: Posts that request, share, or discuss any mod, client, or tool that provides an unfair gameplay advantage or automates actions are not allowed. This includes, but is not limited to: - Cheats/Hacks: x-ray, fly, noclip, speed, auto-aim, kill-aura, item duplication, or any code that bypasses server protections. - Automation Bots: baritone, path-finding bots, auto-miner, auto-farm scripts, or any software that plays the game for you. - Server-Evasion Tools: mods that let players circumvent whitelist, OP requirements, anti-cheat plugins, or rank-bypass systems. - Any client that is primarily used to gain advantage (e.g., client-side world-seed revealers, block-through mods, etc.). Allowed content: performance optimizations (OptiFine, Sodium, OptiFabric), visual shaders, UI enhancements, legitimate gameplay utilities that do not give an advantage (e.g., minimaps, inventory management mods), server-admin tools for rank management, and discussions about modpacks, version updates, or mod features. If a mod has both legitimate and cheat-like uses, consider the primary purpose and the context of the post. When in doubt, ask the moderators before posting. This rule aims to keep the subreddit focused on genuine modding discussion while preventing the spread of cheating tools.	Title: Using mods to enhance gameplay and creativity Description: Encouraging discussion and sharing of ideas on how to effectively use mods to enhance gameplay and creativity in Minecraft.
